

AI IN SECURITY SYSTEMS

Innovations to Help Food Producers

OVERVIEW

The introduction of intelligent video surveillance with artificial intelligence (AI) applications has vastly improved the way security is managed and used. Breakthrough security technologies present a suite of features that can be an integral part of a good Food Defense Plan.

In the past, food manufacturers deployed access control and video surveillance as a security measure only, without any consideration for food regulatory requirements or good working practices.

Today food manufacturing companies can think differently about their security systems. It is now possible to deploy security solutions that will also provide an additional tier of confidence for FSMA, Intentional Adulteration & Compliance Mandates.

COMMITMENT TO EXCELLENCE

The operation and functionality of the security systems performance will improve with superior video quality and enterprise level access control.

- Seamless integration between security systems & the food production lines.
- Self-learning video analytics present a directory of event & warning notifications.
- Appearance search to indicate unknown persons at internal & external areas.
- Flexible configurations for workflow routines, access levels & integrated video feeds.
- License plate recognition & improved security automation for transport & logistics.
- New security projects to include specific design emphasis for the food industry.
